Stag's tears, bloud, urine, dung; taking from the two latter occaſion to commend the Medical uſefulneſs of the Excrements of all ſorts of Animals, as that of Swallows for the Colick; of Peacocks, for the falling ſickneſs; of Dogs, (which they call Album Græcum for a diſguiſe) againſt the Angina; of Hogs and Aſſes againſt Hæmorrhagies; of Cows, againſt the ſtings of Bees and Waſps, and other Inflammations; of Horſes, againſt the Colick, Pluriſie, Suffocation of the Matrix, expulſion of Fœtus, and the ſecundines; and that of Men, againſt the Plague, &c.

But the Principal uſes in Phyſick, for which he commends the volatil Salt and Spirit made of the horns and bloud of Stags, is, its piercing, opening, attenuating, abſterſive, diſcuſſing vertue.

He interſperſeth here and there, as he hath occaſion, many Philoſophical and Spagirical remarques: e.g. How all Acids change the nature of volatil Salts: How nature produceth the volatil Salt out of Acids or fixed Salts: How plants, and divers parts of Animals may by their volatil Salts be Chymically repreſented: by what method the volatil Salt of Harts-horn may be freed from its ungrateful Smell, without much impairing its virtue: why Harts-horns taken off from the beaſt between the middle of Auguſt, and that of September, yield more and ſtronger ſpirit? whether Harts-horn be better and more efficacious, when calcined, or crude, or prepared by a ſteamy heat? &c.

And among the many Medical preſcripts, ſet down here, the Author gives us the Podagrick unguent of the ſo much famed Franciſcus Joſ. Borrhi, made up of almoſt all the parts of a Stag: which how far it deſerves commendations, muſt be learn'd from experience.

V. A Diſcourſe of SPEECH, originally written in French by MONSIEUR CORDEMOY, now Engliſhed in 12°. This Diſcourſe, written conformably to the Carteſian Principles, hath been formerly given an account of, viz. Numb. 37. p. 236. and is only mention'd again here, becauſe of its being now rendred Engliſh, for the uſe of thoſe that are not skill'd in the French.

Errat. p. 766. l. 3. del ſo. p. 776. l. 14. r. alia. ib. l. 24. r. quin. p. 778. l. 1. r. autem.

In the SAVOY,
Printed by T. N. for John Martyn, Printer to the Royal Society, and are to be ſold at the Bell a little without Temple-Bar, 1668.